

THE POST-PRACTICE TRADITION

From a Street Food Vendor to the “Family Post-Sport Tradition”

Simbongsa sits directly across from a busy sports park. Families pass the door every practice — hungry, with a reason to stop. The opportunity isn’t awareness. It’s conversion.

THE INSIGHT

“Simbongsa isn’t competing against other Korean restaurants — it’s competing against families going straight home after practice.”

Already nearby · already hungry · already a reason to stop. The challenge is conversion, not awareness.

What We Observed

- ▶ Across from a sports park — on the path families travel after practice.
- ▶ Families already visit — the behavior exists, not yet the habit.
- ▶ Children drive snacks — kids influence the decision.
- ▶ 6,000+ Instagram followers already watching.
- ▶ Korean street food offers real differentiation.
- ▶ Rush-hour traffic sits below the location’s potential.

The Conversion Gap

The opportunity is not attracting new audiences.

It’s converting more of the audience that already exists — every practice day.
